The powder room in this Miami, FL bachelor pad is located near the home's entrance, making it one of the first things seen upon entering. Designer Sandra Diaz-Velasco of Eolo A&I Design, Inc. in Miami made the room's entrance flush to the rest of the foyer wall so it was nearly invisible. When the door is open, the elements in the space reflect the feel of an art display.

The modern, clean palette begins with a Porcelanosa Pedestal Faces stand in Havana Dark, against a backlit wall covered in white Iceland Barbed natural marble stone tiles. A simple modern Porcelanosa Lounge wall-mounted lavatory faucet sits over the sink, joined by a small Vallvé shelf and towel rod, all finished in black to provide additional contrast.

A large mirror on the adjacent wall reflects the light, making the small room appear larger. The mirror's opposite wall is painted black as not to distract from the artistic elements.

The white natural stone Ceniza Matte flooring tile runs throughout the room, leading to the far wall where a Duravit wall-mounted toilet with Geberit in-wall tank system continues the contemporary concept.

LORI CARROLL and GUILLERMO BAZUA

Lori Carroll & Associates, Tucson, AZ

This industrial and concrete powder room is the statement child of Lori Carroll (pictured left) and Guillermo Bazua of Lori Carroll & Associates in Tucson, AZ. The clients wanted a bold abstract room, but without the typical provocative colors and flashy elements. Faced with an unusual layout, Carroll and Bazua created a unique design with an urban loft feel, with many custom-built pieces to fit the 72-sq.-ft. space.

A custom floating vanity with Horizontal Grain LoLo and open shelving underneath in a neutral tone stands out against the slanted slab charcoal tiled walls. An oval Lacava porcelain vessel sink sits on the vanity, with a Hansgrohe Puravida lavatory faucet situated behind it. Bocci 14 single pendant lights and Motiv accessories from Ginger add a light touch.

The curved vanity wall wraps around to create a toilet alcove with walls finished in burnished metal sheets. Mounted in the alcove is the Duravit Puravida wall-hung toilet.

The other walls have a Hopper Custom Raked Plaster finish. The flooring is Imola Koshi Dark Grey in 12"x24" tiles, keeping with the edgy dark nature of the room.

NAR BUSTAMANTE

Nar Design Group, Carmichael, CA

Challenged to create a daring powder room for fun, young homeowners without taking too much space away from the other living spaces, Nar Bustamante of Nar Design Group in Carmichael, CA designed this small room with big impact.

After entering via a frosted five-panel glass pocket door, the sink wall draws the eye to the right.

Using large-format textured tile with a mirror inset flush with the tile, Bustamante created a lit niche behind the sink for small necessary and/or decorative items. A single thickness Dekton Kadum counter carries the Duravit Vero vessel sink paired with a Brizo Siderna single-handle lav faucet. The counter is under lit to showcase the textured wall, while two concrete side-lights help layer the lighting, warming the space.

The adjacent walls are covered in a metallic peeling rust wall application, which provides an extraordinary wow factor and fun vibe. The wall treatment continues to the Duravit toilet, which is backed with matching large-format textured tile opposite, unifying the room.
